

FINANCIAL LITERACY TALK

The University of Nairobi, Mombasa Campus FISA (Finance & Investment students association) in collaboration with the commercial bank of Africa organised a financial literacy talk held on 31st October 2018. Early financial education is important for individual well being and also for economic health. The set of skills that allow people to manage their money wisely were discussed. FISA is a professional club which deals with students specializing in finance and accounting to practice and perfect on their areas of specialization. FISA main aim and objective is to create awareness among students on the role of finance in the business environment via holding seminars and public lectures and also to enhance the interaction of the members with other sectors in the economy, with special reference to the financing sector, while at the same time, instill a sense of responsibility (to the students) towards the society.
